

Chris Bruner

Chief Product Officer

Chris Bruner is Chief Product Officer at Tradeweb Markets, where he is focused on executing the firm's vision for entering new markets, expanding Tradeweb's ability to deliver cross-product capabilities across asset classes and client segments, and drive consistency in the firm's approach to the product implementation process across businesses.

Prior to his current role, Bruner was Managing Director and Head of U.S. Institutional Fixed Income, where he led Product and Sales across all credit and rates products for the Tradeweb U.S. Institutional sector. Prior to this, Bruner was Head of U.S. Credit Product and was focused on advancing the development of the firm's product offering and building the firm's presence in credit markets globally. Tradeweb's credit platform continues to report significant growth, with average daily volume in credit trading globally at Tradeweb averaging more than $29.7bn over the first three quarters of 2022.

Previously Bruner worked in a senior credit trading role at JP Morgan Chase, and has extensive experience in credit markets, technology and electronic trading. Prior to that, he was a Managing Director at Citadel Securities heading the Algorithmic Credit Trading business. Earlier, Bruner managed the FX Quant Advisory and Development team at UBS Investment Bank where he was instrumental in the development of electronic FX and derivatives markets. Bruner started his career in exchange traded derivatives with SBC O'Connor in 1994.

Bruner holds a B.S. from MIT.
